Three Moves In December To Save Taxes Next April

Tax reporting is annual, with every tax year standing alone. And by the time you figure your 2015 taxes in April 2016, it's too late. Consider your own circumstances and focus on the biggest bottom-line effect. Here are three tax steps to consider as the end of the year approaches:

1. Get Paid This Year Or Next? It usually pays to defer income and accelerate deductions when you can. Yet sometimes it may pay to accelerate income into 2015. Depending on your numbers, if you anticipate paying AMT, a little extra income in 2015 might take you out of AMT. It might pay to grab income in 2015 rather than getting paid in 2016. Conversely, if you'll be better off getting paid in 2016, consider trying to delay payments coming your way. You may not be in control of your own income, but you may have some degree of control. Just be careful of constructive receipt rules, since sometimes 'pay me later' means taxes now.

2. Pay Your State Taxes. For many taxpayers, one of the most important tax deductions is state income taxes. If you own a home, property taxes can also be big. Figure out approximately how much you will owe your state in April 2016 for 2015. If you pay the state taxes in December 2015, you can deduct them on your 2015 federal tax return. If you wait until April 2016 to pay, you can't deduct them until you file your 2016 federal return in 2017.

Nevertheless, don't write a big state income tax and property tax checks on December 31 if they create an AMT problem. Figure your AMT by running the numbers. Many regular tax breaks are disallowed for AMT purposes. Examples include property taxes, state income taxes (or state sales tax), miscellaneous itemized deductions, and personal exemptions. If you elect to claim a sales tax deduction instead of a state income tax deduction, consider accelerating big purchases into 2015 to assure a deduction for sales taxes.

While you're figuring state taxes, it can be tempting to seek greener pastures. This isn't a year-end move or something to take lightly. However, if you think you can save a bundle, consider moving to beat high state taxes. You could move to a low-tax or no-tax state.

3. Optimize Deductions, Including Charitable Contributions. Tax return time in April or October can be especially frightening if you haven't planned ahead. Before year end, tally your income and deductions and see how it looks. Often, that act alone will inform you what to do. You really can't handicap this without calculations.

Try to claim deductions when you get the best benefit. Usually, that's earlier, but not always. Consider using a credit card to prepay expenses if they'll generate deductions this year. Remember, credit card payments are like writing a check for tax purposes, even though you might not receive—or pay—the credit card bill until next year.

Every year end is a good time to think about charity and deductible contributions. Consider supersizing your tax deduction with stock or other property if you can. As 2015 comes to a close, taxpayers are once again facing uncertainty as Congress has yet to act on a host of important provisions that expired at the end of 2014. We'll just have to wait and see how everything plays out.
